Hogan

The hogan is the traditional dwelling of the Dine' (Navajo) people. A hogan can be round, cone-shaped, multi-sided, or square; with or without internal posts; with walls and roof of timber, packed earth, and stone in varying amounts, and a bark roof for a summer house. The door traditionally faced east to welcome the rising sun, believed to bring good fortune.

Hogans are also considered very energy efficient. They are built using packed mud against the wooden walls and are kept cool in summer by natural ventilation and water sprinkled on the packed dirt floor. In winter the fireplace kept the inside warm well into the night.
